JOURNAL ACTIVITY

If Charlie Pierce didn’t keep a journal about his many adventures, we would not know about pioneer life in South Florida! The author wrote the Adventures of Charlie Pierce books based off firsthand accounts from Charlie’s journal. Journaling is an important part of history. Journaling makes it possible to learn about historical events from an individual’s point of view.

We are experiencing History today. For example, you are now attending school from home and life is different than before.

Directions: Pick a day of the week and journal about your entire day. Write in paragraph form about your day and how it made you feel. Compare life before this to now. How is your life different? How is it the same? Then, on a separate sheet of paper make an illustration about your journal entry.
In the box below, illustrate your journal entry.
